And when he is old, he will not depart from it.*

Cincinnati Hebrew Day School offers a program especially designed for the Jewish children of Cincinnati. Our comprehensive program in general and Jewish studies gives students an intensive education, provides them with values and knowledge about their heritage, and prepares them for their roles as knowledgeable, creative, productive American Jews.

Our creative and progressive educational program offers many advantages:

- general and Jewish studies in the same setting
- individually guided education
- bi-lingual program
- small classes with low pupil-teacher ratio
- a deep personal interest in each student
- development of the total child
- a Montessori pre-primary program
- achievement test scores averaging two years above grade level
- Torah-true Jewish education

Above all, we believe that Jewish education is the key to Jewish survival. We feel strongly that American Jewish children should be informed about both of their heritages. The informed American Jew is a proud American Jew, proud of his ancestry, his heritage, his identity. Our program is designed to instill a strong sense of Judaism in our children and promote the Jewish way of life.

Your support enables us to continue our program and provide this education that is indispensable for Jewish self-preservation.

Help combat assimilation and alienation by continuing to help us educate the generation of tomorrow.

"The records of Day School students are outstanding and fantastic in comparison with those who just receive a secular education. It is a disciplined education, it is a deep education, it is an education not only of science and history and mathematics, but is an education of morals, it is an education of spiritual qualities that mean so much to us as a people for the last four thousand years."

Former Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare
