

ROBERT M. SENIOR, president of the Bureau of Jewish Education since its inception in 1925.

"I have always contended that every parent, whether he be orthodox, conservative, or reform, should give his child the opportunity of securing a Jewish education. Some children may show no appreciable benefit; but the majority of them may develop religious and spiritual qualities that later in life may be a source of comfort, peace of mind, and enrichment of the soul."

"With a view of attaining this objective, the Bureau of Jewish Education of Cincinnati seeks to serve all the religious groups in the community."

"At the end of a quarter of a century of existence, the Cincinnati Bureau of Jewish Education finds itself rendering educational and cultural services to the diverse elements and organizational bodies of our community: to the communal schools, to the congregational schools, to the youth clubs, to the adult organizations, to the synagogues and temples, to individuals, and to the community at large."

"The Bureau of Jewish Education has definitely become a significant factor in the cultural growth and educational advancement of the Jewish community in Cincinnati. The Silver Jubilee celebration of the Bureau is therefore a signal event in our community."

DR. MOSES ZALESKY, executive director of the Bureau of Jewish Education since 1946.
